"ONE HUNDRED YEARS"

HOLDING FAST TO THAT WHICH IS GOOD

REACHING FORTH UNTO THOSE THINGS

IN THE BEGINNING...

A GREAT PAST

To be permanent a college cannot be built. It has to grow. To thrive it must be indigenous to the area in which it is planted. To be strong it must send its roots far into the soil and withstand the winds, floods, and droughts. To serve fully it must identify itself with its constituents, sharing their aspirations, their struggles, their successes.

Mars Hill College, now the oldest educational institution on its original site in Western North Carolina, and the first school established in the state west of the Blue Ridge Mountains by Baptists, has grown up with the region in which it is located. Founded by pioneers, it has weathered a century of changes from frontier conditions to the present modes of life. It has shared the vicissitudes and hopes of those who planted it and of those who have sustained it, through the hardships of backwoods life, war, reconstruction, panic, and prosperity and has continued in the vanguard of the educational, social, and spiritual progress of the area.

It was conceived and built by a small group of pioneer citizens of limited means, the sons and grandsons of the first settlers of the community, who wanted a school in which they could educate their children according to the principles of their faith.

A rapid campaign was waged until two thousand dollars was subscribed when the contract was let to Shackleford and Clayton, contractors at Asheville, North Carolina. The bricks were made by slave labor and the lumber was sawed on one of the old vertical water sawmills.

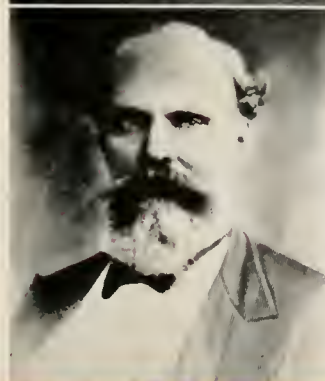

Edward Carter (upper left) and T. S. Deaver (lower right) contributed one hundred dollars each to the erection of the first building of the college. Rev. William Keith (upper right) and J. W. Anderson contributed fifty dollars each. When $2,500 was subscribed, the contract was let for the building.

William Albert Gallatin Brown,
president 1856-1858

John B. Marsh,
president 1858-1861

Pinkney Rollins, teacher 1860-1861, president
1861-1863, 1865-1866

Meriwether Lewis,
president 1868-1871

After the original building was completed, the trustees, twenty-five in number, found themselves in debt to the contractors in the sum of $1,875, which was, when prorated, $75 to each. The contractors, not willing to dally about the matter, proceeded against a single member of the board, J. W. Anderson, who had a likely Negro man named Joe. They seized Joe and lodged him in Asheville jail until the claim was settled a few days later.

In 1856 the school opened its doors as the French Broad Baptist Institute, taking its name from the French Broad Association, which at one time included most of Western North Carolina and a small part of East Tennessee. The first president was W. A. G. Brown, a consecrated Christian and scholarly gentleman. He was succeeded in 1858 by the Rev. J. B. Marsh, of Binghamton, New York. On February 16, 1859, the school was chartered by the General Assembly as Mars Hill College, not that it pretended to do college work. The charter gave the College the "power of conferring all such degrees and marks of literary distinction as are usually conferred in colleges or seminaries of learning," a power which the College still has but which it has never used. The newly chartered college flourished under the guidance of the Reverend Marsh, drawing students from a widening circle.

The storm of war then broke upon the community and rudely displaced the tranquillity of learning. Some donned the gray and followed the stars and bars; other clad in blue marched off under the stars and stripes. When Mr. Marsh found the position untenable and resigned in 1861, the Reverend Pinkney Rollins succeeded him and attempted to keep the school open. The enrollment dwindled, however, until only a few young women were in attendance. In 1863 the college succumbed to the war. While troops were quartered on the campus, two buildings were burned and the original building was badly damaged. During this raging of fiendish war, faith led John Robert Sams and others frequently to the devastated school building where they sought through prayer the sustenance of Christian Education and the restoration of their school for the youth of the land.

When settlement was made with the builders of the first building there was found to be a debt of eleven hundred dollars, and not a cent in the treasury. The debt was soon turned into a judgment against the President and Secretary of the Board of Trustees, and the Sheriff of Buncombe County came and levied on a fine young Negro, named Joe, and carried him to Asheville jail for safe-keeping till the day of sale; it was then that the eleven men put their heads together and met the crisis.

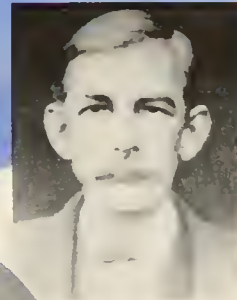

These simple statements give the facts behind what has become a campus legend. When the story was revived in the 1920's and given to Robert Ripley for his "Believe It or Not" feature and to other press services, it went around the world and has occasionally made good copy since. At Mars Hill, however, the incident has come to symbolize the human values which have gone into the college.

WAR CLOUDS GATHERED...

The year the Southern armies surrendered, Mr. Rollins again opened the doors of Mars Hill College and youth, through poverty and desolation, resumed their study. Partisan bitterness was rife, however, and some returned to the classroom still bearing their arms. The Reverend John Ammons took charge of the college for two years. Then a cultured old gentleman of Virginia, Meriwether Lewis, directed the college, assisted by the youthful John Robert Sams. Reconstruction, poverty, and the bitterness of strife between adherents of the Ku Klux Klan and the Union League finally forced the college to close its doors again in 1872.

After these devastating years and still under the direction of John Robert Sams, the dilapidated building housed a branch of the Oxford Orphanage from 1873 to 1875. Within two years the College revived and struggled onward through a decade of changing leadership under J. B. Lunsford, James Frank Tilson, William P. Jervis, and Zebulon Hunter, who suddenly and unexpectedly closed the College on March 28, 1890.

A few weeks after the resignation of Mr. Hunter, Miss Helen McMaster of Columbia, South Carolina, who was in Asheville recuperating from illness, volunteered to come to Mars Hill College to teach the children in the vicinity. Miss McMaster was the harbinger of a better day for Mars Hill College. Soon after she began as tutor to the children of a few select families, more than forty students of all ages clamored for admission to her classroom. When the term she was engaged to teach drew to a close, the trustees and patrons beseeched Miss McMaster to remain and assume the headship of the school. She refused the administration, but agreed to continue as teacher if the trustees would employ a qualified educator as president. The trustees met her request and elected the dynamic Thomas M. Hufham, who was later joined by the distinguished spiritual leader, John E. White. Under these leaders Mars Hill College took a forward step. This advancement in learning continued for the next half decade, despite the burdensome financial problems, under succeeding presidents T. M. Cheek, the Reverend J. H. Yarborough, C. P. Sapp, A. E. Booth, and W. P. Maury.

In April, 1897, the Reverend B. W. Spilman was making a tour of Western North Carolina in the interest of the Sunday School Department of the Baptist State Convention when he visited the Reverend T. M. Honeycutt, a trustee of the College. They were joined by John Robert Sams, also a trustee, and they talked of the future of the college. Dr. Spilman suggested they try to lay hands on a tall young man down the hill by the name of R. L. Moore. Following this suggestion, in the summer of 1897, the Board of Trustees called Robert Lee Moore and Edna Corpening Moore, filled with the courage a vigor of youth, to accept the academic opportunities and the financial responsibilities of Mars Hill College.

The heroic young couple found the college plant to consist of only two inadequate buildings and less than four acres of land. Dr. Moore's high regard Until 1890 playing ball of any kind on the college grounds was strictly forbidden and could not be participated in except by special permission of the chairman of the board of trustees. One reported for violating this rule was given demerits. To play a game of ball the students would have to repair to some field away from the campus. Professor White organized the first athletic team to represent the college in 1890.

The first ministerial conference was organized in 1900 by the Reverend Walter E. Wilkins, a member of the college faculty 1899-1900.

A NEW ERA DAWNED...

for the scholastic standards, together with his deep spirituality, received sympathetic support in his young companion who gave herself in tireless effort to the financial and physical growth of the college. In truth, the financial condition was such as to necessitate Dr. and Mrs. Moore's sacrificing their home life in order to maintain the girls' dormitory, in which Mrs. Moore served as dietitian, housekeeper, nurse, and mother to all the girls.

Under such sacrificial leadership and with the high academic standards and Christian ideals, Mars Hill College began to attract students from practically every state in the union and from foreign countries. Its faculty, likewise, grew. Despite the continued financial struggle, Mrs. Moore's extraordinary business management succeeded in placing the college upon a basis of financial security and on the way to expansion.

In memory of their only child, who died in infancy, Dr. and Mrs. B. W. Spilman, became the first benefactors of the college, giving a home for young women. This donation was followed by the erection of a young men's dormitory by Mr. M. C. Treat of Pennsylvania, who also established the first loan fund for young ministers. Within a few years the college expanded to include Moore Hall; the auditorium; the artistic stone library, a gift of Colonel H. Montague of Winston-Salem; and Rivermont dining hall and dormitory, named for the donor, Rivermont Church in Lynchburg, Virginia. Further contributions by Mr. Treat and sacrificial giving of the faculty members greatly increased dormitory facilities for young women.

Robert Lee Moore and his wife, Edna Corpening Moore, in 1896, the year before they came to Mars Hill.

Dr. B. W. Spilman

In 1917, War subdued the world. Once again the young men left the classroom and marched off to conflict. When veterans after the war sought Mars Hill College, they found her with an inadequate campus and dormitory space. The young men were housed in almost every home in the village. In this crucial situation as in all previous ones ardent prayer opened heaven.

In the spring of 1923, Mr. John Robert Sams and his daughter, Mrs. John Anderson, made a deed to the College for land for the boys' dormitory. Several months later, Mr. M. C. Treat wrote President Moore that he would give $5,000 for a boys' dormitory if friends of the College would contribute a like amount. The North Carolina Baptist Convention made possible the securing of the money. By 1924, two dormitories were ready for boys. In appreciation of the Christian ideals of the college, patrons, trustees, and alumni made other gifts. Outstanding among these was Mr. W. C. McConnell, patron and trustee for many years, whose generous gift made possible the McConnell gymnasium; and the Robinson infirmary was built by relatives and friends in memory of the late Dr. W. F. Robinson, trustee and college physician. The endowment also was increased.

Mars Hill College as Dr. Moore found it in 1897.

Dr. Moore did not have the physical strength, however, to press the campaign for buildings and endowment. Yet Mars Hill College, competing with the growth in other colleges, especially state colleges, was compelled to go forward with her expansion program. Thus on February 6, 1935, Dr. Hoyt Blackwell, since 1928 teacher of Greek and Bible in the college, received at the office of the American Express Company in Jerusalem a letter from Dr. Moore, appealing to him to return to Mars Hill College to direct the endowment and enlargement campaign. Dr. and Mrs. Blackwell, then traveling in the Near East, turned their faces homeward and another new day dawned for Mars Hill College.

In a meeting of the Trustees May 26, 1938, Dr. R. L. Moore submitted his resignation as president of Mars Hill College, asking that he be allowed as long as vigor of body and mind be vouchsafed to him to teach and to strengthen as he might the ties which bind the college and the former students, now numbered by the thousands.

The trustees reluctantly accepted the resignation of President Moore, and after silent appeal for God's guidance and without comment the trustees unanimously elected Professor Hoyt Blackwell president of Mars Hill College, his term of office beginning on the eleventh day of June, which date marked the expiration of Dr. Moore's forty-one years of service and also his forty-fourth wedding anniversary.

The Expansion Program continued. On Founders Day, October 14, 1940, the Charles M. Wall Science Building was dedicated.

During the ten years following World War II, the Endowment and Enlargement Program continued its expansion under the consecrated and sacrificial leadership of President Hoyt Blackwell. On May 30, 1946, the dormitory for women, constructed in 1941, was named for Mrs. Mae Cline Stroup

The growth of the campus during Dr. Moore's first fourteen years as president is evident with the increase in the number of buildings from 2 to 7. The summer home of Dr. B. W. Spilman was obtained in 1902 as a residence for girls. In 1906, the Treat Annex (now Treat Dormitory) to the Spilman home containing an assembly room, a dining room and kitchen, and laundry room was completed. The auditorium was completed in 1906; the Treat Hall for Boys (the front part of the present Spilman Dormitory) was completed in 1907; and the building which now bears the name Moore Hall was completed in the spring of 1910.

Rivermont Dormitory, razed in 1954, was formerly the twenty-room Riddle Hotel. The property was purchased in 1914 and named Rivermont after the church in Lynchburg, Virginia, which made its purchase possible.

Robert Lee Moore, president 1897-1933; president emeritus, 1938-1949; known as the second founder of Mars Hill College.

Mrs. Edna Corpening Moore served the college from 1897 to 1950 as dietitian, housekeeper, nurse, mother to the girls, and finally as Bursar.

Looking west on College Avenue: Spilman Dormitory, built in 1907, enlarged in 1921, and remodeled in 1921; Moore Hall, first used in the spring of 1910, contains the administrative offices, the art studio, and eight classrooms; McConnell Gymnasium, planned by the late W. C. McConnell, the most liberal contributor, and later fostered by the Alumni Association, was erected in 1924.

Looking east across the little circle: The auditorium, with a seating capacity of 800, was erected in 1906 largely by donations from people of the community; Montague Building, a gift in 1919 from the late Colonel H. Montague of Winston-Salem in honor of his wife, enlarged in 1933, served as the college library until the fall of 1955. It now houses the Department of Public Relations. Music Building, erected in 1892 for classrooms and one of the two buildings Dr. Moore found when he arrived in 1897, has since been divided into studios for teachers and small practice rooms for piano and organ.

W. F. Robinson Infirmary, completed in 1935, was made possible by an initial gift by Mrs. W. F. Robinson in memory of her husband, gifts by the college faculty, and gifts from others who aided in the undertaking.

Melrose Dormitory, the last large gift from the late M. C. Treat, was opened to students during the fall of 1924. Brown Dormitory, a duplicate of Melrose, was completed in 1925.

PRESENT

THEY CALL ME

My sons and daughters are many. Through the years they come and go. In happy festive mood they return for a day. With words of tender praise they portray me. I see them and I hear them, beloved children all. The few are near, the many, out in life's busy whirl. Sometimes I wonder how the struggle goes.

'Tis then I think with some assurance of what they sought and found in these halls on this campus: Learning, skills, knowledge, wisdom they all acquired in a measure. Few have failed to find and carry away with them into life that spirit which makes men and women strong, that spirit which causes men and women to strive for the right, to cherish the honorable, to exalt Christian service, to give their all in some great and righteous cause, to walk before God and place their lives at the Master's feet.

"TIME IS OF THE ESSENCE"

. . . a bit of his philosophy

The Staff is privileged to dedicate, with affection and esteem, this Centennial Edition of the LAUREL to Dr. Hoyt Blackwell — a Christian gentleman, a scholar and educator, an administrator par excellence, a constant friend of students and teachers and all.

The most evident accomplishment of Dr. Blackwell's administration may be observed in the transformation of the campus — seven state-ly buildings erected, older buildings renovated, equipment modernized, the boundaries of the campus extended, the spacious grounds landscaped and beautified.

Dedication

. . . a student at Mars Hill College

Less apparent have been his achievements in the internal development of the college — the expanded curriculum, the strengthened faculty and staff, the added facilities, and the increased endowment and resources.

More lasting than the physical increment and more significant than fiscal stability are the preservation and the extension of the spiritual heritage of the college — maintenance of thorough scholarship and high moral standards, promotion of wholesome and edifying campus life, emphasis on Christian verities in ideals and action. In these attainments Dr. Blackwell has led the way. The strength and luster of his character — his integrity, his industry, his faith — are a priceless asset to the college, and of such is the glory of Mars Hill.

STEVE BLACKWELL
President

Linking the college students and the local church, the Baptist Student Union serves as the unifying force of all religious organizations on the campus. It seeks to develop the spiritual and social life of the student by giving a foundation for a life of Christian endeavor. The Executive Council is composed of executive officers and representatives of the unit organizations. The Greater Council is composed of working committees headed by executive council members. The B.S.U. sponsors vespers, morning watch, and prayer groups as well as the traditional Thanksgiving program, seasonal parties in the dormitories, and other religious and social activities.

MINISTERIAL CONFERENCE

The Ministerial Conference is composed of young men who have felt the call to the ministry. Weekly meetings offer them training in preaching and effective Bible reading. These ministerial students serve as ushers for the Sunday evening services in the local church, direct the evening worship once a quarter, and help promote a bond of Christian fellowship in other church activities. The faculty counselors, aided by years of experience as ministers and teachers, offer suggestions and criticisms which are invaluable to these future pastors.

Volunteers for Christ are young men and women whose love for Christ causes them to seek opportunities to serve Him in any vocation which they may choose. There was fun, fellowship, and lasting friendships for all of the members, but most of all, there was the witnessing through song, personal testimony, and programs which emphasized missions and stewardship. Jo Ellen Bradley was president of the organization.

YOUNG WOMEN'S AUXILIARY

The Young Women's Auxiliary has a special place in the program of Christian discipleship by giving students a broader and more comprehensive conception of world conditions and missionary activities. This group meets together to study about the various mission fields and the activities of the mission workers there. The Y.W.A. sponsors the Lottie Moon Christmas Offering and directs other missionary activities on campus.

BROTHERHOOD

The Brotherhood gives proper Christ-centered direction and purpose to the men of the campus. Among other activities, the Brotherhood participates in conducting prayer meetings and week-end revivals.

MISSION COUNCIL

Through the Mission Council, Mars Hill radiates the Christian atmosphere for which it is so distinguished. Various off-campus missionary activities such as Oteen Veterans Hospital services, prison camp services, conducting nearby missions, and similar activities keep the members busy for Christ.

YOUTH TEMPERANCE COUNCIL

The Youth Temperance Council encourages and promotes the principles of Temperance in all walks of life. "Plain living and high thinking" is the motto of the council. Keith Gage is president of the organization.

METHODIST STUDENT MOVEMENT

The Methodist students on the campus are provided opportunities for training and fellowship by the Methodist Student Movement. A spirit of friendly cooperation exists between the MSM and the BSU.

HONOR CLUBS

To be invited to join an honor club is a merit worthy of praise. A great deal of hard work, study, perseverance, and genuine interest are necessary for anyone who wishes to become a member of an honor club. The clubs cover the fields of business, English, history, the languages, music, religion, and science. The scholastic requirements are thirty quality points and a B on the subject which the club represents. Other personal qualifications are considered. The clubs meet once each month and present programs of particular interest to the members.

DRAMATEERS

For those who love good plays and enjoy acting, the Dramateers affords fellowship and experience in stage productions. Two major productions and numerous one-act plays are presented during the year. Mars Hill always achieves high ratings in the productions which the Dramateers give in the annual drama festival at Chapel Hill. Last year both plays won awards and Mrs. Elizabeth Watson, director of the organization, was elected President of the North Carolina Dramatics Association.

Susan Glaspell's one-act murder mystery, "Trifles," features Dramateers Len Evans, Barbara Scott, Carlisle Driggers, Paddy Wall, and Charles Bentley.

The Mars Hill College Band stepped sixty strong onto the football field — the largest band in the history of Mars Hill College. The Marching Band traveled to Gardner-Webb and Lees McRae where they put on excellent half-time shows. The half-time shows here at Mars Hill were unusual and full of laughs, surprises, and intricate marching maneuvers. The Marching Band also traveled to Asheville to participate in important parades. The Concert Band will tour North Carolina this year. There are fifty musicians in the Concert Band. Hard work and good music prevail in this elite musical organization. The Concert Band will give a Spring concert, a May Day concert, and a graduation concert here at Mars Hill.

In the field of Forensics Mars Hill is respected by junior colleges and senior colleges alike. Always a tough opponent, last year Mars Hill placed first in the Grand National Forensic Tourney, Fredericksburg, Va., in the Book Review, After-Dinner Speaking, Poetry Reading, and Extempore. Mars Hill College debate teams have been rated Junior College Champions for the state of North Carolina for 1954, 1955, and are seeking to clinch the title this year. In the Smoky Mountain Forensic Tourney, 1956, Mars Hill's team of Don Kroe and Steve Blackwell were rated as winners of first place in their division, having defeated all opponents while debating both sides of the question. In the Appalachian Mountain Tourney Mars Hill took first places in after-dinner speaking and extempore speaking, Steve Blackwell winning honors as second place all-round debater. Among the tournaments annually attended by the varsity debaters are Appalachian Mountain Tournament, Southeastern Tournament, South Atlantic Tourney, Barkley Forum, Grand National Forensic Tournament, and the Smoky Mountain Tournament.

MARSHALS

If one has good character, pleasing personality, displays leadership ability, and is a good scholar, he may be chosen as a college marshal. These select few carry out the tasks of maintaining quiet, ushering people to their seats and being of general assistance to guests in the auditorium.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB

The Home Economics Club is composed largely of home economics major. These future homemakers, many planning to teach in this field, learn what goes into the making of a good home. The many tantalizing aromas which fill the Science Building each afternoon are but one example of the splendid teaching of Mrs. Mary Howell.

GIRLS' HOUSE PRESIDENTS

Acting as hostesses in their dorms, the Girls' House Presidents assist the house mothers in promoting a spirit of cooperation throughout the dormitory. They preside at the house meetings, keep the girls informed of the latest regulations, arrange parties, and represent their dorms in general group meetings.

Molly Jeffress, Peggy Melton, Bonnie Wooten, Carol Pace.

BOYS' HOUSE PRESIDENTS

As anyone can tell you, it takes more than a house mother to keep a dormitory full of boys in order. The Boys' House Presidents function effectively by cooperating with the house mother in making the dorm a place of abode for one big happy family.

THE 1956 LAUREL

Never in the history of Mars Hill College has another LAUREL staff been able to begin work on an edition of the yearbook with a theme which was so easy to select, yet so difficult to organize and present in a manner befitting the occasion.

Ideas were discussed and rejected and not until work was well under way did the layout take its final form.

Work on the LAUREL began in late September. Photography schedules were made and, for those who were absent minded, re-made; the layout was drawn up after hours of consultation with the engraving artist; the selector of Miss Laurel was chosen; copy was written and delivered to the printer; photographs were numbered and sent to the engravers; and then came the period of anxiety while we waited for the page proofs to come for a final proofreading.

We were striving for a pinnacle of achievement — a LAUREL which would be commensurate with a centennial birthday of Mars Hill College. We believe we reached our goal and we are happy to present the LAUREL for 1956. . .

FIELDY DIZE
Editor

Mr. Chapman looks through the layout of the 1956 Laurel with Fieldy Dize, John Lackey, Toni Nelson, Roger Scott, and Kenneth Hampton.

ROBERT R. CHAPMAN
Faculty Advisor

We should like to write a word of special appreciation for those who assisted the staff with this publication. "Pop" Stringfield and Mr. Walter Smith were always willing to shoulder their cameras on a moment's notice. The HILLTOP'S sports editor, Hugh Wilder, wrote for the LAUREL, too. John Vance and Bill Gibson worked with our Business Manager in soliciting advertisements, and Mary Redwine was very understanding when she heard that her picture had inadvertently got into the freshman section.

To Mr. John McLeod and Dr. Ella Pierce and her co-workers, authors of From These Stones and a pageant depicting the history of Mars Hill College respectively, we are especially grateful for the material which we used from their publications.

And to all of you who helped in the many ways too numerous to mention here, we express our heartfelt thanks for helping us get our job well done.

THE HILLTOP

Those of us who work on the HILLTOP have the unique responsibilities of providing you with up-to-date information, as well as serving as scribes to record the history of the college as we see it unfold. Through the annals of time the bi-weekly newspaper with its coverage of sports, activities of various clubs and organizations, news about famous personalities who visit our campus, and recognition of outstanding students will become the written chronicle. During this the Centennial Anniversary of the college we have not suffered from lack of news.

It is our sincerest hope that our accounts of the day-by-day happenings of this year have been interesting and informing to our current readers and will prove to be accurate and complete to those who will know this chapter in the life of Mars Hill College only as we describe it.

FOOTBALL 1955...

The Mars Hill Lions eleven were able to schedule only six gridiron contests during the 1955 football season. This was due to the fact that most of the teams in the conference dropped out. The conference consisted of only Gardner-Webb, Lees-McRae, and Mars Hill.

The Lions opened their '55 campaign on their home field, losing to Gardner-Webb 13-7. The visiting Bulldogs broke a 7-7 tie late in the game to stop the Lions. During the remainder of the season, the Lions lost three more tilts while tying two with Lees-McRae. Carson-Newman traveled to Mars Hill and plastered the Lions 21-7. The "Mountain Men" played host to the junior varsity team from East Tennessee State and lost to the powerful eleven 25-7. Mars Hill tied Lees-McRae 7-7 and 14-14 and lost their final contest of the season 20-0 to Gardner-Webb.

Although the Lions were unable to break into the winner's column, there were a few bright spots in their attack. Ward Holland, fleetfooted halfback, showed signs of brilliance on a few occasions. He looked sharp on broken-field running and scored on two long runs during the season. One of these sprints was a 95-yard punt return. Bobby Robinson once again guided the team from the quarterback position. Jerry Crowe, hampered by injuries during the entire campaign, proved his worth to the team as a stellar halfback. In the line there were such standouts as Paul Shaw, Charley Ramsey, Otis Pitts, Sammy Stillwell, Tom Fryer, Ervin Poore, and Don Maynard. The end position was weakened by the loss of Freddie Bibb due to a shoulder injury. Bryant Bibb, second team quarterback, was put out of action by a knee injury before the season opened.

Paul Shaw, Jerry Crowe, and Otis Pitts were chosen on the all-conference eleven. Pitts will be back next year, but Shaw and Crowe are completing their second year with the Lions. Freshman standouts who will probably see plenty of action next season are Bill Clegg, Marshall Southern, John Tyner, Bryant Bibb, Herb Brown, and Holly Shirley in the backfield; Otis Pitts, Don Maynard, and Sidney Lee in the line; and Sammy Reese at the end position. With these boys serving as a core for a team, Coach Don Henderson should be able to change the football picture here at Mars Hill during the 1956 football campaign.

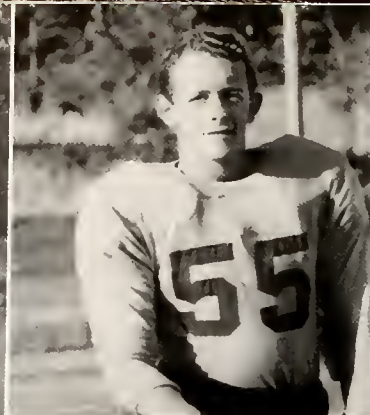

M-CLUB

The hope of every aspiring athlete is to become a member of the athletic honor club — the M-Club. The M-Club gives honor and recognition to those outstanding in any of the major sports. As one walks about campus he may spot the proud members of the club by their "M" jackets.

The Mars Hill College Lions, coached by Bob Edwards, finished their 1955-56 basketball season with a 6-10 record. The Lions, being weak at the pivot position, were unable to stand up against tall competition. Mars Hill started the season strong, but was unable to continue the fast pace.

The Lions met Lees-McRae in the first round of the conference tournament at Spruce Pine, North Carolina. The Lees-McRae quintet cut short the Lions' march to the finals with a 91-70 win. North Greenville, undefeated during the regular season, became the tournament champions for the second year in a row.

Wayne Godshall, ace forward on the Mars Hill five, led the scoring parade for the Lions. Godshall finished the regular season with a 23.4 average and a total of 375 points. He collected 33 more in the tournament. Captain Bobby Robinson provided the second half of the Lions' scoring duo with 306 points and a 19.1 average. Godshall was also the leading scorer in the conference and was chosen on the all-conference team.

Bobby Robinson and Bobby Watson will be the only ones graduated from the '55-'56 team. Returning for duty next year will be starters Emerson Glenn, Ellis Murphy, David White, and Raymond Earp. Others returning will be Sammy Reese, Bill Martin, Cecil Greene, and Charles Webb. The Lions of Mars Hill can be looking for a much better season for the next basketball campaign with these boys serving as a basis for the '56-'57 team.

COACH VIRGINIA HART

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

Though there are no intercollegiate sports for women at Mars Hill College, the Women's Athletic Association could hardly be more active. The WAA promotes participation in the various sports and provides a splendid intramural program which is open to all young women of the college. Sparked by the boundless energy of Coach Virginia Hart, the WAA also sponsors the Red Cross blood bank, operates concession stands at football and basketball games, and participates in other worthwhile projects throughout the year.

INTRAMURALS AT MARS HILL

The Intramural Basketball League consists of twelve teams. Out of these twelve teams only two remained undefeated: SAMS and TOWN. Spectators were amazed at the speed and control the individual teams displayed on the court. The Tournament has not yet been played, but either SAMS or TOWN is favored to win the championship. Individual scoring honors are in store for Bill Williams, ace forward for the SAMS team. In six games Williams averaged 19 points per game for a total of 114 points.

HOMECOMING

The early morning sun beamed brightly on Thanksgiving day as alumni poured onto the Mars Hill campus for the traditional Homecoming celebration. The day seemed one tailored just for this centennial year. Alumni were greeted and registered at the registration desk. Welcome signs were placed in key positions. By the time old grads had finished their rounds of handshaking, it was time for the Thanksgiving service in the church. Following the service, everyone journeyed to the cafeteria for a delicious turkey dinner. Highlighting the afternoon was the crowning of three queens: Centennial Queen, Nona Moore Roberts; Homecoming Queen, Anne Buchanan Robinson; Football Queen, Lucia Holder. This event was followed by a concert by the Mars Hill College Band. A large turnout of friends and alumni helped make the festivities of this day one of the highlights of the centennial year.

A PROMISING FUTURE

The observance of the centennial of Mars Hill College is an occasion of gratitude for the evidence of Divine guidance through the years and of appreciation for those who have expended themselves and their means at the College.

For the vision, faith, and consecrated labors of those who have wrought here; for the 10,000 men and women who have left the savor of their lives on the campus and are now leading nobler, more useful lives for having studied here; for the 1,000 students and more than 100 members of the faculty and staff who are perpetuating the traditions of the College; for a host of friends who are lending their influence and means to our higher endeavor . . . we are grateful.

Girded by the strength and experience of 100 years, the College faces the challenge and opportunity of the future and invites others to share in the glorious enterprise of providing youth the best in education.

Hoyt Blackwell, President
MARS HILL COLLEGE

O school, that through difficulties many hath made thy way,

*Thou hast reached success immortal
here to stay;*

O school, who wast born of heavenly light,

Thou hast come through thy tribulation in robes of purest white,

*With pride that dares, and seeks not praise—
a true and silent pride,*

With a joy that dreams, not content with past deeds known far and wide,

For the Spirit that smiled upon thee in days of shadow and gloom

Still guides, and will guide 'til thou hast reached full bloom

In a glorious future that ever will bear the truths of thy blue and gold

At home and afar, on land and sea, 'til the love of Jesus be told.

Yes, wider still and wider shall thy bounds be set

For God who hath made thee great will make thee greater yet.
